Characterization of the complete genome sequence of barley yellow mosaic virus in barley by next-generation sequencing. Barley yellow mosaic virus (BaYMV, genus Potyvirus) is one of the most important plant viruses distributed worldwide and causes significant losses to barley production. In this study, next generation sequencing (NGS) was applied to develop a rapid and efficient genotyping method for BaYMV. Sequence read data from the NGS were combined with RT-PCR products of all known ten BaYMV genes plus the untranslated region (UTR) from the viral genome (GenBank accession No. KP835884). In this way, a set of overlapped sequences of the eight genes were found and assembled into the genome sequence of 12585nt length. The genome contains a single open reading frame that encodes all putative proteins in the polyprotein of 3879aa length. BaYMV-R confirms the assumption of the polyprotein being putatively processed by three virus-encoded proteases and that the other eight genes are also translated into mRNAs. The results demonstrate that BaYMV consensus primers based on the sequence of coat protein (CP) gene of BaYMV not only achieved the detection of BaYMV infections in different barley varieties but also improved the specificity and sensitivity of detection. In addition, the genotyping sequence can be used in the detection of recombination events in BaYMV.Q: PHP Zend Framework: How do I return a HttpResponse object from a controller action? What is the best/correct way to return an HTTP-Response from a controller action? Currently, I do like: `$layout = Zend_Layout::getMvcInstance()->getLayout(); $layout->setLayoutPath('/application/views'); $layout->setBasePath('/application/views'); $response = $this->_getResponse(); $response->setRedirect('/application/views/list/view', array('id'=>999)); $layout->`

In the 15th century, Hieronymus Bosch (1450 - 1516) worked as a painter, illustrator, teacher and illuminator for Theatres of the Mediterranean (Theatrum Mundi) in Nuremberg. During his early career, he painted small cartoons and ambiance scenes for the stage. He would then create elaborate scenes out of this imagery in book illustrations and triptych altarpieces. At the age of 31, he received a commission to illustrate “The Garden of Earthly Delights” a book written by a young woman named Aleida March and published by Edward Poynter. He expanded the theme of the book on paper, creating a series of pendant panels and a book-sized illustration called “The Garden of Earthly Delights”. The composition was so large and filled with bizarre imagery, that Bosch had to incorporate the book into the panel work, thus the triptych was born. The Garden of Earthly Delights is one of the most extraordinary, and bizarre paintings in Western art. It features a dreamy assembly of both humans and animal figures who seem to be interacting in a surreal, otherworldly paradise. The painting is surreal because its images, which seem to be arrayed on the surface, are deeply symbolic and contain multiple meanings. They also seem to pop out of the page, blending into one another, which is a fundamental characteristic of Bosch's paintings. However, there is more to the composition than meets the eye. Some of the characters hold secret powers, and are in fact caricatures of the real people who commissioned the work. The viewer can navigate the painting to discover hidden secrets and conjure up their own meaning. As the viewer walks around the painting, they can hear Bosch describe aspects of the painting and interact with a robot character. The spirit of the work is that each viewer will receive their own interpretation, as the painting is intended to be unique for every person.
