Purpose ===== Guideline recommendations support patients' decisions about cancer screening. The objective of this review is to synthesize guideline recommendations for adults and children on cancer screening for colorectal cancer, breast cancer, and cervical cancer and determine how well guideline makers have incorporated the best evidence into their recommendations.

Methods ===== We searched PubMed, Medline, CINAHL, and the Cochrane Database of Systematic Reviews for publications on cancer screening in adults and children from 2004 to 2009. Two reviewers independently abstracted the study characteristics and extracted data on the source of evidence, grading of the recommendations, and a specific summary of guideline recommendations.

Results ===== We identified 29 guidelines on cancer screening in adults and 31 guidelines in children. Twenty-three (79%) guidelines included grade-level recommendations, and nine (31%) made no recommendation on cancer screening. Evidence-based recommendations were identified in most guidelines: 52% of adult guidelines included recommendations based on randomized trials, observational studies, or consensus, and 83% of pediatric guidelines included recommendations based on randomized trials, observational studies, consensus, or a systematic review. The evidence-based recommendations were of similar quality in adults (50%) and children (64%). The summaries of best available evidence included: the benefits and harms of screening (36% in adults, 67% in children), screening barriers (36% in adults, 14% in children), and cost-effectiveness (10% in adults, 59% in children).

Conclusion ===== Guidelines recommend the use of cancer screening according to best available evidence, though there was a lack of recommendation on the basis of randomized trials. Future guideline recommendations on cancer screening should include recommendations on best available evidence. The present invention relates to a method for producing an object (electronic component), and a system for producing an object (electronic component). Methods are known in which components having terminals, for example, terminals which are connected to leads for further processing or the components, are fixed onto a substrate plate or a holding plate, in which case the terminals are connected to the substrate plate or the holding plate (e.g. by ultrasonic vibration welding, clamping, etc.). The components are subsequently separated from the substrate plate or the holding plate (e.g. by means of sawing, laser cutting, etc.). The components are thus obtained in which the connection of the terminals to the substrate plate or the holding plate is interrupted. Philadelphia

Q: How to show href links without spaces on hover I have a `ul>li>a` where the space I entered is only a space between `li` and `a`, I want this: something but this: something instead, there will be no space on the hover; `li>a: hover { color:red; }` How to do it?

Thank you for any help. A: I suggest you to use an easy solution and wrap an element with that one. Like this: something something CSS: `.show-hide { display: none; }` And the JQuery: `$(".show-hide").hover(function() { $(this).show(); $(".show-hide").not(this).hide(); }, function() { $(this).hide(); $(".show-hide").not(this).show(); });` Please note that you need JQuery. My JQuery experience is almost zero so maybe you can use the provided answers to find a better solution. Hairstylist Kerri Smith has been working in the beauty industry for almost 20 years.
