In the early 20th century, banks and insurance companies began to offer credit to people with a good reputation and collateral, rather than simply to those with gold. Pamphlets produced by small financial institutions such as those that issued credit cards now sell their services to people who would otherwise be restricted from obtaining credit. The small loan industry began to dominate banking. In the 20th century, the eight largest banks in the U.S. had assets of $2.7 trillion in 2018, while the top 100 banks had assets of $21 trillion.[3] In January 2010, bank assets in the US were $12 trillion.[4] Losing Gold In The Year 1946 (Sequel to Lost Cities) Mp3 Download!!
