some more missions from the fleet submarine were conducted later in the bay of bengal. the first was commanded by captain ravi singh. in march 1971, he engaged in a challenge with the pns ghazi for attacking it. ravi singh's command of the s-21 is the only record of submarine warfare between india and pakistan. the second mission was conducted by lieutenant commander arjun verma. after that, the submarine was assigned to provide support to the kilo-class submarine. sankalp reddy has managed to film crucial scenes and incidents in a unique way - the country's first submarine, pns ghazi, is seen in a state of destruction on the bay of bengal. the team has also performed some wonderful tricks under water and it seems the effort has paid off. on their way to attack the ins vikrant, the trio realised the absence of the indian warship on the eastern seaboard. the film shifts to the psychological point of view as to why the destroyer was not sighted. the leg of the destroyer was ripped off due to bomb-cartridge explosion. the battle of gujarat, as it is known, took place on december 6, 1971, between the british royal navy and a joint fleet of indian and pakistani naval forces. part of the indian navy then, captain singh (kay kay menon) is ordered to escort british naval ships carrying aid to india's eastern front. the encircled pakistani navy forces that sent a submarine to attack the four british vessels that arrive at the port of cochin also end up sinking the bigger vessel, rajput. the film also centres around the operation to retrieve captain singh who is an especially brave and patriotic captain (who while on board ins s-21 discovers this and feels satisfied with the fact that he has imparted well to his subordinates). he imparts to arjun his expectations regarding the successor to his post. arjun's orders are to stop s-21 from going within the pakistani waters and stop it from attacking the paf aircraft, especially the infamous uh-1 helicopter that is a landmark of the war. 5ec8ef588b
