The focus has shifted from dedicated mission statements (published every few years by our companies) to one common set of mission goals that would serve us all: good business to all. We have not forgotten the art of writing company mission statements, or the power of detailed, crystal-clear statements of purpose and values. We continue to do so, as we realize our mission is not what we do so much as why we do it. • Why do we exist? • What do we do? • What do we expect from our partners? • Why do we want to succeed? • What are our values? • How will we live those values in daily life?Q: Why isn't my code working when I use break in a loop? I have a function: def f(a, b, n, counter=1): for i in range(0,n): counter += 1 print(a, b, n, ":", counter) if i == n: print(counter) break And it works fine, but when I add a break in the loop, it doesn't work: def f(a, b, n, counter=1): for i in range(0,n): counter += 1 print(a, b, n, ":", counter) if i == n: print(counter) break Is this a bug in Python? Is there any way I can make it work with breaks? A: When a break is reached, the
