List of wicketkeepers who have scored Test centuries
In cricket, a wicketkeeper is a position in which a batsman plays the ball when there is a "wicket" (or wicket line) that has been put down by the wicketkeeper, after dismissal of the batsman. In limited-overs matches, the wicketkeeper is positioned where the pitch is, being behind the stumps. In the modern era, the wicketkeeper is typically equipped with a helmet, padding and a mask. The wicketkeeper of a team is expected to catch the ball when it is hit onto the ground for a run by the batting side, or it may be received by the wicketkeeper after fielding it from a bowler's throw. Wicketkeepers have been included as batsmen from the start, with two players who were the wicketkeeper and batsman: Jack Hobbs and Lance Barnett. In the case of Hobbs, he was generally given higher status than other openers, and as such was expected to come to the crease regardless of the state of the game. At the time it became uncommon to play a batsman as the wicketkeeper; however
